

Could a new labor law force doors open to unions?

As a former union organizer with the Teamsters, I'm most familiar with the Labor Relations Institute. They get it. Whenever I was up against them, I knew I would lose my election because they understand that it takes a positive approach to employee relations issues to keep a union from getting a grip on your work force. Not all of these type of consultants have figured that out.

